Summary: This fall was relatively quiet with few outstanding rarities. Best birds were a White Pelican for a week in August at Nayanquing and the second SBA records of Thayer's Gull and Purple Sandpiper. Rod Planck's Thayer's Gull follows on the heels of the one he reported last fall at the same time and location, but this bird was far more cooperative and was observed closely for 30 minutes. Joe Soehnel's Purple Sandpiper was only seen for a short time on one day, a number of observers could not relocate the bird on the following day. Given the amount of rocks and breakwaters in the Karn Plant/SRDDI area, this is perhaps not surprising but may also indicate we could overlook them fairly easily. Other good birds included a group of 3 Cattle Egrets, 2 Peregrines, Short-eared Owl, Marbled Godwit and a good string of Hudsonian Godwits at Shiawassee. An impressive total of 9 Bald Eagles were also at Shiawassee in late November, and a late Dickcissel trapped by Bob Grefe while banding was unusual. Unfortunate casualties in the area were an immature Golden Eagle near Saginaw and two Saw-whet Owls.

The number of days in the field reported by observers was down from last year so that late dates and high numbers were generally not extraordinary and many species appeared to be under-reported. Only Shiawassee had a reasonable showing of shorebirds, and ducks appeared down everywhere (as last year) although the number of Mallard and Black Ducks at Shiawassee was very high (~45,000). There were a good number of Osprey sightings into October, and plenty of Pine Siskins around. Redpolls and Evening Grosbeaks were scarce however, as were Fox and Tree Sparrows for the second straight year.
