Weather: Unlike the past few years, this spring was rather cool and wet, wet, wet. This resulted in somewhat higher water levels in the Saginaw Bay and much more water in the pools at places like Nayanquing Pt. and Shiawassee National Wildlife Refuge. In fact, the high water levels prevented the regular birders from accessing parts of SNWR for a portion of the season. The higher water levels, coupled with the vegetation growth on the formerly exposed mudflats, made shorebird viewing more problematic.

Conversely, some of the flooding knocked down large areas of cattails at SNWR allowing good views of the usually more secretive birds like moorhens, rails, etc. The cold fronts moving through the area seemed to prolong the migration of passerines through the end of the period.

Summary: In spite of the weather which, at times, was not conducive to comfortable birding, a record high number of species, 268, were observed in the area with a good number of casual/rare species sighted. Some of the highlights include a flyover Red-necked Loon at TPSP, several Red-necked Grebes, an Eared Grebe at SNWR, a large number of sightings of American White Pelican, not only along the Saginaw River and Saginaw Bay, but also from an "inland" location at Sanford Lake. (I wonder if these birds may be from the breeding flock that disappeared from their usual site in N. Dakota?)

Larger number of American Bitterns were seen, possibly the result of the improved visibility and higher water levels. A total of eight species of herons/egrets/night-herons plus the Great-white Heron morph were observed including Snowy, Little Blue, Tri-colored Herons and Cattle Egret. A Glossy Ibis was a nice surprise for David Peters at SNWR. Both, Greater White-fronted and Ross's Goose were recorded and a Eurasian Wigeon was well viewed by the Hubirigers at the Shiawassee State Game Area in Saginaw.

A Piping Plover again made an appearance at TPSP but no attempted breeding was evidenced at this site. There are reports of attempted nesting further north on the Lake Huron shoreline. Other shorebirds of note were a Ruff in non-breeding plumage photographed at SNWR, Red Knot, Baird's and Stilt Sandpipers. Confirmation of a report of a Long-tailed Jaeger from Iosco County is still being pursued. Laughing and Little Gulls were seen at TPSP and the Lesser Black-backed Gull made its now regular appearance at BCSRA. Two Long-eared Owls at Hampton Twp. in Bay were unusual.

Olive-sided & Yellow-bellied Flycatchers were noted as was a Western Kingbird in Midland. Six species of vireos, including White-eyed at Nayanquing Pt. were recorded. A Carolina Wren was observed in two locations in Bay and there were several reports of Northern Mockingbird from various locations. A total of 33 warbler species were tallied plus a Lawrence's Warbler hybrid. A Worm-eating Warbler at Tobico Marsh in Bay was seen by several people for one day only. Other noteworthy warblers included Kirtland's, Connecticut and Hooded. A Lark Sparrow was reportedly photographed at SNWR by an out-of-state birder. Common Redpolls hung around in good numbers well into April and Evening Grosbeaks appeared in Huron and may be nesting near Cooke Dam in Iosco.

The reports for this area are increasing, probably due to the increasing number of birders in the field and the number of reports being submitted to the various birding websites now in existence. Thanks to all for your participation.
